World Public Sector Report 2017

- Focus: how can governments, public institutions and public administration foster integrated approaches to the implementation of the 2030 Agenda and the SDGs?
- Three structuring dimensions to the analysis:
 - Horizontal integration
 - Vertical integration
 - Engagement of non-state actors
- Includes a thematic chapter on integrated approaches to post-conflict situations
 - Other themes: (integrated approaches to) health, migrations

Multiple challenges in post-conflict situations

What we expect from the discussion today

- Informing the World Public Sector Report 2017. Your perspective on....
- Integration: what does it mean in post-conflict contexts?
- What is really new in terms of integration in post-conflict countries, compared to a few years ago?
- Have the SDGs, as a framework , helped integration on the ground, and if so, in what way?
- how can concretely contribute to integrated approaches in post-conflict contexts?
- Examples of actions of national public institutions and public administrations that have helped to “connect the dots” between short-term priorities, peace and state-building, and development?
- How do they address the challenges of horizontal and vertical integration, of participation and engagement?

Thank you!
